1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Neuman (U.S. Patent 6,226,862).

This is a new ground of rejection.

Column 5 of Neuman discloses a process which includes forming a plurality of electrical contact materials on a substrate which is relatively insensitive to inductive heating, and performing an induction heating step upon such a structure.

Neuman does not specifically state that one will heat "different first and second portions... by different first and second amounts" or "induction heating...by different first and second amounts" as required by instant claims 1 and 13 respectively. The examiner's position is that a differential treatment of various portions of a heated material is inherent in the prior art process, i.e. some portions of the material will inevitably be closer to the heat source than other portions and thus will receive a greater amount of heat than portions further from the heat source. Therefore, the claimed invention is held to be fully disclosed by Neuman.

Alternatively, the examiner's position is that one of ordinary skill in the metallurgical arts seeks to minimize the amounts of heat necessary to achieve a desired result in a heat treatment process, i.e. to minimize the amount of heat produced and the amount of energy consumed in a given process. Therefore it would have been considered an obvious expedient by one of ordinary skill in the art to only treat certain desired portions of a metal in a prior art heat treatment process, such as that of Neuman. Thus, at a minimum, the disclosure of Neuman is held to create a prima facie case of obviousness of the presently claimed invention.

3. The response of September 2, 2004 included an explanation of Applicant's interpretation of the term "electrical contact" as used in the present invention, and the materials used in the previously cited Detert reference clearly do not meet such an interpretation. Thus, the previous rejection based on Detert is withdrawn. The disclosure of Neuman is clearly more relevant to the claimed invention than any previously cited prior art.

4. Claims 4-12, 14, 15, 17 and 18 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. The prior art does not disclose or suggest treating to result in the properties defined in claims 4 or 17, nor does the prior art disclose treating under the conditions as defined in claims 5-12, 14, 15 and 18.
